About Shreveport Regional Airport: Opened on July 6th, 1952, the Greater Municipal Airport became the region’s commercial carrier airport, replacing the Shreveport Downtown Airport, which opened in 1931. Airline service was initially provided by Delta Air Lines, Chicago & Southern Airlines and Mid-Continent Airlines. In 1971, a 160,000-square-foot terminal with two new concourses, a restaurant, and lounge was added. The name was then changed to Shreveport Regional Airport to reflect the impact the airport had in the region. Shreveport Regional Airport is served by five air carriers: Allegiant with non-stop service to Las Vegas and Orlando, American Airlines with non-stop service to Dallas, Delta Air Lines with non-stop service to Atlanta, GLO with non-stop service to New Orleans, and United Airlines with non-stop service to Denver and Houston. More than 616,000 passengers traveled through SHV in 2015.
